
Provider Credentialing

Regence uses its credentialing process to provide members with a selection of physicians and other health care professionals who have demonstrated backgrounds consistent with the delivery of high quality, cost-effective health care. Regence has established criteria that is used to evaluate a provider's credentials. The credentialing criteria serve as the foundation for determining a provider's eligibility and continued eligibility on all Regence networks. Providers are expected to remain in compliance with credentialing criteria at all times.

Individual Provider Credentialing

Initial Credentialing

Regence requires that all providers falling within the scope of the Credentialing Program complete the initial credentialing process prior to contracting. Only those applicants licensed in Idaho, Oregon, Utah or Washington (as applicable based on practice location) and in those specialties recognized by Regence will be considered. Providers whose credentialing approval status has lapsed more than 120 days will be required to resubmit an initial application.

Upon receipt of a completed application, the application is reviewed and information is verified before being reviewed for final approval of participation. Incomplete submissions will delay the process.

Providers who have been denied initial participation do not have the right to submit an appeal. Refer to the participation criteria for additional information.

Recredentialing

Regence requires that all providers falling within the scope of the Regence Credentialing Program complete the recredentialing process at least every three years. Providers whose contracting status has lapsed more than 120 days will be required to resubmit an initial application.

The recredentialing process is initiated by the Credentialing Department based on the last credentialing or recredentialing approval date. To streamline the process, Regence has developed a recredentialing profile that is populated with information previously submitted to Regence. The recredentialing request is sent six months prior to the recredentialing due date. All providers are expected to respond to the request for recredentialing in a timely manner. Additional information analyzed at the time of recredentialing may include, but is not limited to, member complaints and quality improvement activities. All providers must be recredentialed and approved for continued network participation. After completing the recredentiaing process, providers will only be contacted by the Credentialing Department in the event of an adverse decision or conditional approval status. Providers must agree to these conditions in order for contracts to be maintained.

Providers who have been terminated from network participation have the right to appeal. Refer to the provider contract termination appeals process for additional information. Physicians or other health care professionals leaving a delegated entity must notify Regence and are subject to recredentiaing guidelines.

Delegated Credentialing

Regence may delegate credentialing activities to contracted provider groups whose membership includes a minimum of 350 providers. Provider groups must demonstrate the ability to meet Regence's performance standards. Credentialing for organizational providers and facilities cannot be delegated. Regence retains the right to approve new physicians, other health care professionals and facilities and to terminate or suspend individual physicians or other health care professionals as necessary and appropriate.

Organizational Provider Credentialing

Facilities are recognized by Regence as organizational providers. These facilities may include but are not limited to:

- Ambulatory Surgery Centers
- Hospital Medical Centers
- Home Health Agencies

- Skilled Nursing Facilities
- Behavioral Health Care Organizations

All contracted organizational providers are expected to be in compliance with all credentialing criteria.

Initial Credentialing

Regence requires that all organizational providers which fall within the scope of the Credentialing Program complete the credentialing process prior to contracting. Refer to the credentialing criteria for a listing of organizational providers that require credentialing. Organizational providers whose credentialing approval status has lapsed more than 120 days will be required to resubmit an initial application.

Organizational providers that have changed ownership and are required to complete the site survey process by the state and Medicare must be initially credentialed under the new ownership. If the state and Medicare allow the acquisition without the application and site survey process, credentialing is not required.

A completed application is reviewed using a variety of national and state data sources before being considered for final approval of participation. Incomplete submissions will delay the process. Organizational providers that have been denied initial participation do not have the right to submit an appeal. Refer to the participation criteria for additional information.

Recredentialing

Regence requires that all organizational providers that fall within the scope of the Regence Credentialing Program complete the recredentialing process at least every three years. Organizational providers whose contracting status has lapsed more than 120 days will be required to resubmit an initial application.

The recredentialing process is initiated by the Credentialing Department based on the last credentialing or recredentialing approval date. The recredentialing request is generally sent out six months prior to the recredentialing due date. All organizational providers are expected to respond to the request for recredentialing in a timely manner. Upon receipt, the application is reviewed using a variety of national and state data sources. Additional information analyzed at the time of recredentialing may include member complaints. All organizational providers must be recredentialed and approved for continued network participation. After completing the recredentialing process, organizational providers will only be contacted by the Credentialing Department in the case of an adverse decision or conditional approval status. Organizational providers must agree to these conditions in order for contracts to be maintained.

Organizational providers that have been terminated from network participation have the right to appeal. Refer to the provider contract termination appeals process for additional information.
